DETAILED ACTIONClaim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in–
(1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effect under this subsection of a national application published under section 122(b) only if the international application designating the United States was published under Article 21(2)(a) of such treaty in the English language; or
(2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that a patent shall not be deemed filed in the United States for the purposes of this subsection based on the filing of an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a).

2. Claims 129-154 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Ross et al [5,859,628].

Ross et al '628 discloses an apparatus and method for a personal onboard information system, wherein it is determined whether a vehicle needs a service, e.g., maintenance (column 10), positions or locations of the vehicle and at least one service providers are obtained using GPS (columns 8 and 10), and a service provider closest to the vehicle position is selected (column 10). According to Ross, there is provided a database or memory for storing service provider information, e.g., position (column 8). Furthermore, as explained in column 9, information is communicated via audio media or visual (display). A distance between the vehicle and the selected service provided is determined based on the acquired GPS positions of the vehicle and the service provider, and wherein the service provider is selected based on the determined distance (column 10). More particularly, Ross discloses that the system provides the user with information of the nearest rest area in response to the vehicle's position and direction. Route planning from the vehicle position to the service provider is also provided. As explained in column 10, should vehicle maintenance be required, the location and distance to the nearest repair facility is determined. It is inherent in the art that in order to determine the distance between the vehicle and the service provider and to determine the closest or nearest service provider to the vehicle, the position of the vehicle has to be compared to the position of the service provider.

3. Claims 129-132, 134-141, 143-150, and 152-154 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Blaker et al [5,790,973].

Blaker et al discloses a last exit warning system for a vehicle, wherein the current position of the vehicle and a plurality of service areas locations areas obtained using GPS. According to Blaker et al, the locations of the service areas can be stored in a memory or database. When it is determined that the vehicle needs service, e.g., refueling, a processor compares the position of the vehicle with the service area locations to determine which one is closer to the vehicle position. See columns 3 and 4. Furthermore, a distance from the vehicle to the service area locations is determined. Based on the determined distance, the closest service area is selected. As described in columns 4 and 5, the information is communicated via an audible or visual message and the position of the vehicle is compared to the positions of the service areas.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 3661

5. Claims 133, 142, and 151 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Blaker et al [5,790,973] in view of DeGraaf [5,819,201].

Blaker et al discloses the limitations as set forth above. However, Blaker et al does not particular teach providing directions (route) to the selected service provider. DeGraaf, on the other, discloses a navigation system with vehicle service information, wherein the system guides a vehicle from a current position to a selected service provider (location). See column 2. Thus, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time of the invention to be motivated to modify the system of baker et al by incorporating the features from the navigation system of DeGraaf because such modification will ensure that the driver (vehicle) reaches the proper location of the service provider.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
